Section Title: Finance, Assessments and Administration - Payments
Subject: Overpayment of Benefits
Effective Date: New overpayment decisions on or after May 1, 2017

A. POLICY PURPOSE

The Workers Compensation Act of Manitoba (the Act) provides that the Workers Compensation Board (WCB) may recover overpayments when an injured worker or worker's dependant has been paid more than they were entitled to under the Act. The WCB strives to prevent overpayments of benefits; however, the payment of benefits in as timely a manner as possible means that some overpayments will inevitably occur.

This policy establishes the framework for preventing, recovering and writing off overpayments, and outlines the effect of overpayments on an employer's assessment rates or WCB costs.

B. POLICY

I. Prevention of overpayments:

1. reasonable attempts to contact the worker and employer to verify wage information;
2. clear notification to injured workers that duplication of benefits, such as Long-Term Disability or Canada Pension Plan (CPP) disability benefits, will create an overpayment situation; and
3. notification to injured workers of other common situations that may create overpayments.

II. Recovery of overpayments:

All overpayments will be pursued for recovery when:

1. the overpayment is a result of an administrative error that the injured worker or worker's dependant is notified of within 30 days of it occurring. Administrative errors noted after 30 days will be pursued if the injured worker or /injured worker's dependant could or should have been aware of the error. These are not adjudicative or entitlement decision errors. These are errors made by the WCB in implementing a decision, i.e. adjustments made to earnings to correct clerical or mathematical errors;
2. there is evidence of fraud, deliberate misrepresentation, delays in providing or withholding of key information by the injured worker or worker's dependant affecting benefit entitlement; or
3. there is a duplication of benefits paid from another source for the same injury, for example Long Term Disability or CPP disability benefits.

Repayment methods may include a single payment or a series of regular payments from the injured worker or worker's dependant or deductions from ongoing or future WCB benefits.

III. Notice to injured worker or worker's dependant of overpayments:

When an overpayment is pursued for recovery, the WCB will:

1. contact the injured worker or worker's dependant to advise about the existence of the overpayment;

2. confirm the overpayment details in writing; and
3. set up an acceptable recovery plan or progress to other recovery methods when it is considered necessary.

IV. Decision not to proceed with recovery of an overpayment:

The WCB will not pursue an overpayment when:

1. the overpayment is less than $50; or
2. the overpayment resulted from an adjudicative or entitlement decision reversal at the primary level, Review Office or Appeal Commission.

With the exception of those overpayments resulting from fraud, deliberate misrepresentation, withholding of key information by the worker or dependant or duplication of benefits paid from another source for the same injury, the WCB may decide not to pursue an overpayment when:

1. the receivable amount is not cost-effective to pursue;
2. recovery of the overpayment, in whole or in part, would create financial hardship for the injured worker or the worker's dependant;
3. the individual who received the overpayment has died without sufficient funds in the estate to cover the overpayment; or
4. the overpayment occurred more than three years prior to its discovery by the WCB.

The WCB will write off an overpayment when the decision not to pursue has been made.

V. Overpayments not initially recovered:

Overpayments that remain outstanding will remain as a receivable for up to six years, during which time recovery action may be reinstated if the circumstances contributing to non-recovery change.

For example, an overpayment may be pursued at a later time if:

1. evidence arises of fraud, deliberate misrepresentation or withholding of key information affecting benefit entitlement;
2. it becomes cost-effective to pursue recovery; or
3. the conditions creating financial hardship no longer exist.

VI. Reconsideration and appeal of an overpayment:

Decisions about the establishment, amount or requirement to pay back an overpayment are subject to reconsideration and appeal. Anytime a reconsideration or appeal is formally received and actively being pursued on an overpayment, recovery attempts will be suspended pending the outcome of the decision. Recovery action may be reinstated before the reconsideration or appeal decision is issued if the WCB has evidence that the primary purpose of the appeal is to defer the recovery process.

VII. Effect on employers:Class E:

For Class E employers, overpayments are removed from an employer's cost experience record. The cost of written-off overpayments is shared collectively by all Class E employers.

The credit to the employer's claim cost experience that arises from an overpayment will be processed in one of the following ways:

When the overpayment credit affects an employer's assessment rate for the upcoming rate-setting year(s), the revised claim costs experience is used to calculate the employer's assessment rate(s).

When the overpayment credit affects the claim costs experience used to calculate an employer's assessment rate in current and prior rate-setting years, the revised claim costs experience is used to determine the financial impact, if any, on assessment rates.

Individually Assessed Employers (Individually-Liable Employers as per the Act):

For individually assessed employers, overpayments are included as a claim cost for the applicable employer. Overpayment recoveries are credited to the claims cost of the applicable employer.

If an individually assessed employer has paid workers compensation benefits directly to the worker by means of salary continuance, and an overpayment occurs which the WCB would attempt to recover under this policy, the WCB may authorize the employer to attempt to recover the payment from the worker. The recovery process must conform with the principles and intent of this policy. The employer must report to the WCB the amounts that are recovered from the worker.

The WCB reserves the right to audit an individually assessed employer's recovery process to ensure compliance with this policy.
