

WAGE LOSS BENEFITS FOR CONTRACT (DEEMED) WORKERS

The Workers Compensation Board provides coverage and benefits for contract workers in mandatory industries. Individuals who work on a contract basis for one employer may be deemed to be a worker for that employer as determined by the WCB.

The employer is responsible for the payment of WCB premiums for all deemed workers.

What benefits can I expect from the WCB if I get hurt at work?

A full list of benefits provided by the WCB can be found in the fact sheet "Benefits Guide" or in the Injured Workers Handbook. To view all WCB fact sheets, please go to our website: www.wcb.mb.ca/wcb-fact-sheets

When are Wage Loss benefits payable?

To receive wage loss benefits you must demonstrate an actual loss of earnings due to your injury.

Full wage loss benefits will only be authorized if you are incapable of performing any and all duties, as supported by medical evidence, and if you have no post-injury earnings.

If you are capable of performing modified or alternate duties or have post injury earnings, you will be eligible for partial wage loss benefits. Any post-injury business income that continues will be used to reduce your wage loss entitlement.

How are wage loss benefits calculated for deemed workers?

Once your claim is accepted, the initial average earnings rate will be calculated using gross contract earnings information from your employer and the WCB assigned labour percentage for the industry you work in.

What is a labour percentage?

The labour percentage is used to calculate the labour portion of the total gross contract earnings. This portion is used to establish your average earnings rate and the amount the deemed employer is responsible for paying premiums on for your WCB coverage.

The WCB has a schedule for contract labour in various industries which sets out a standard labour percentage for your industry. See the Assessment Schedule for Contract Labour fact sheet on the WCB website.

How is my Initial Average Earnings rate calculated?

The initial average earnings rate is calculated:

Gross Contract Earnings x Labour Percentage = Gross Wages

- Gross contract earnings are earnings reported by your employer, before deductions.
- The WCB will deduct company commissions and/or wages paid to other workers from gross contract earnings before applying the labour percentage.

Gross annual wages (calculated above) are divided by 52 weeks to arrive at a gross weekly amount.

How are Net Wage Loss Benefits calculated?

To determine net earnings the WCB applies probable deductions and tax credits. Calculations are based on standard deductions and tax credits used by Canada Revenue Agency (CRA), with reference to the Income Tax Act.

Probable deductions include:

- income tax,
- Canada Pension Plan (CPP),
- Employment Insurance (EI) premiums, and
- other deductions the Board of Directors may establish by regulation.

Tax credits include those claimed for basic personal amounts, spouse or common-law partner amount (if they are not working), dependent children, childcare expenses and support payments if you report these credits on your income tax return.

NOTE: Probable deductions represent the estimated amounts you would expect to pay; however, no payment is actually made on your behalf for income tax, CPP contributions or EI premiums.

This information is important for the calculation of your benefits and must agree with the information you report to Canada Revenue Agency.

WCB benefits are non-taxable. To offset the tax benefit created by your reduced taxable income, WCB reduces the benefit rate to more closely reflect your yearly loss of earnings.

In most situations your WCB benefit rate is based on 90% of net earnings. For injuries on or after January 1, 2006, if your net earnings are less than or equal to minimum average earnings, your benefit rate will be 100% of net earnings. If 90% of your net loss of earnings is less than what you would receive based on 100% of minimum average earnings, the WCB will use this higher rate when determining your benefit rate.

The minimum annual earnings in effect as of October 1, 2020 are $24,752 and this amount remains the same as of January 1, 2021.

What if I do not agree with the labour percentage used?

You can request an average earnings review if your actual net earnings are greater than what was calculated using the assigned labour percentage as described above. Your request for review must include the necessary information to support your request.

Any increase to your benefit rate resulting from an average earnings review is retroactive to the date of the injury. Any decrease to your benefit rate resulting from an average earnings review is effective at week 13.

What if I earn income after the injury?

The WCB will use the same labour percentage to calculate post-injury income for benefit entitlement purposes as we used to calculate your pre-injury income.

We will review your post-injury business income based on information you provide until we can verify your actual loss of earnings with your financial statements. Your post-injury business income may also be confirmed with CRA.

What happens if I am on benefits for more than 12 weeks?

If you are on benefits for more than 12 weeks, we will verify your average yearly earnings, if not already done. We will ask you to sign a document authorizing the WCB to obtain copies of your income tax returns from CRA for the past one to two years, or in some cases up to five years. The WCB will verify your gross contract average yearly earnings with information received from CRA.

Benefits will continue based on your verified gross contract average earnings, and the information you provide on your post-injury business income and any wages paid to other workers.

Are wage loss benefits subject to revision?

All benefits are subject to revision at any time, and based on the receipt of new post-injury income and/or business operations information.
